Betting Apps vs Mobile Betting

There are two main ways to bet on a smartphone. The first is by accessing a bookmaker through your regular browser (e.g. Safari or Google Chrome). The second is by downloading an app. Is there any real difference? Is one better than the other? In truth, there are pros and cons to both but overall, we recommend downloading a betting app if you are intending to make regular bets.

Cons of

Betting with Sport Betting Apps

While there are many advantages to betting with an app, one question should be taken into account, namely:

Do you have enough storage on your smartphone?

For models which only offer 16GB or 32GB, squeezing all your apps, photos and videos onto one device can be tricky. This is a very real concern for some users, and one possible reason against using bookmakers' apps when they have a perfectly good mobile site which serves the same purpose.

Cons of Betting via Browser

There are some significant cons to using a browser to visit iPhone sports betting sites, too. If you use a browser to visit your favourite sports betting site you could run into the following issues:

No access to exclusive in-app offers

Unable to access all betting

features

Slower loading time than app

Mobile optimisation issues

If you're only intending to use a bookie one time, it makes sense to access it through a browser.

There's not much point in downloading betting apps for Android or iOS only to delete it a few minutes later – unless you're doing so to access a specific bonus.

So, in these cases, it's often prudent to visit a betting site via a browser. For instance, let's say you see a welcome offer for a bookie you don't really like. You may want to sign up just to take advantage of the bonus. This is the perfect time to access the bookies via your mobile browser.

If you're in a hurry – for, say, a live in-play bet on the footie – it's much quicker to fire up an existing app than it is to visit a website. Trust us, we know how frustrating it can be to see betting opportunities disappear because it took too long to log in to a website and navigate to the betting market that you're interested in.

Most bookies have mobile-optimised websites, but not all. If your one doesn't, it could be tricky navigating the site. And you might not even have access to all of the same features you would on the app.

Making deposits and withdrawals is also much easier on an app. This is one area which can be particularly fiddly using a browser – and certainly an area where an incorrect click could be costly. When using an app, generally these features are made bigger so it's easy for you to click through.
